British Library - Chinese Textile Collection

British Library Chinese Textile Collection
This collection consists of over 10,000 textile samples, including silk, cotton, wool, and synthetic fabrics, from the late 19th century to the present. The samples are arranged in a grid and include various patterns such as floral, geometric, and abstract designs. The card provides information about the collection's history and how to access the samples.

A collection of textile samples and envelopes is displayed on the table. The samples include a red floral pattern, a green leaf pattern, a blue and yellow floral pattern, a white floral pattern, a dark blue floral pattern, and a black floral pattern. Two envelopes from F. VANOUTRYVE & CO are also visible. The envelopes contain handwritten notes and printed labels.
